

Olympus-Kofu (Antique-inspired fabric) and Olympus Fabric (Traditional/Modern print)

According to Olympus Thread Mfg., Olympus's fabrics are sustainable and soft to skin.

The reasons are;

(1) Natural cotton 100% fabrics are used. - The fabrics are woven by Natural cotton 100% threads.

(2) The dyes are not natural, but in order to avoid color-fluxing and make color sustainability increased, the color fixation process is adopted after the printing process. This is a special and costly process. Therefore, it actually makes the cost of fabrics higher.

(3) Formalin is usually used in the fabrics for apparel. However, Formalin content rate of the fabrics is less than 0.05. (This is almost the same meaning as "not contained".)

We have a confidence that Olympus's fabrics are suitable not only for quilting but also for apparel.

Whole process from weaving through printing is performed in Japan, and the quality is controlled strictly. That is, Olympus's fabrics are really "Made in Japan".
